FAILURE
By Chad Kohl

Failure, give it another try.

Lose again, is there really a point to all this?

Give it another go, and yet you lose again!

Be done already, you just can’t seem to make it work

You can’t just do nothing, but you can’t seem to do anything right.

Will you ever live up to their expectations?

Can you ever really get it together?

Keep pushing forward, because that’s all you really know.

Maybe one day you will get it right

Why should you even bother, they’ll never leave you alone

There’s always going to be another set of expectations you just can’t reach

Another goal-missed

Why can’t you ever be happy?

When will you ever get your head right

And stop screwing up everything you touch?

Why can’t you be like everyone else around you?

Failure, give it another try

Lose again, is there really a point to all this?

Give it another go, and yet you lose again

Is this building character or just proving to everyone that you aren’t worth it?

Will they ever see your pain?

Does it really matter, they won’t understand you anyway.
It does no good to complain, it scares them
or worse, it makes them hate you
You may as well be a leper; they cast you out and treat you different because they can’t understand you
Just put on your smile and fake it, pretend like you do belong, that’s what they all want to see
No one wants to hear about what you’re going through
All they want is happy fluff, I’m doing fine, there’s nothing wrong
Just take a pill and shove all deep down inside
Like it never happened, it’s not real
Don’t show your weakness
Don’t show your problems and insecurities
Just conform to what they want, so we can all be happy.